

The SMS Cabaret

An evening of music and improvisation

Improvational Theater, often called improv, is a form of theater done in the moment. We make stuff up. The actors YES AND each other work together, often with help from the audience, to develop situations and characters that speak to the human condition -- in humorous or sometimes serious vignettes. In all cases, improv actors seek to make their performance partners -- including audience volunteers -- look good and take joy in failure, in that it celebrates the attempt.
